Your mother – and other experts nearly as savvy as mom -- told you that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. And who knows breakfast better than eight innkeepers -- The Eight Broads in the Kitchen -- who have cracked more than a million eggs and are still crackin'?! Now the Eight Broads are sharing their passion for breakfast and their guests' beloved recipes in their first cookbook aptly entitled, "Eight Broads in the Kitchen"!

This passion project is a great example of a little idea that keeps blossoming. Professional colleagues with a shared love for food evolved into Eight Broads in the Kitchen and their blog, which in turn, has morphed into close friendships and has now segued into the cookbook. The Eight Broads give cooking workshops and demos at innkeeping conferences throughout the US as well as locally and at their inns. They have also been regular contributors to Innkeeping Now magazine, providing their insight and expertise as an invaluable resource for others in the bed-and-breakfast industry.

Until now, their blog has been the main source for recipes their guests have continually enjoyed when staying at the Broads' B&Bs and where fans have turned to find their favorites in the hope of recreating them from the comfort of their home too. The Eight Broads' aim is not only to acquaint people with their recipes, their area farmers' markets and food sources, philosophy of food and culture, but also to have fun, to be creative, and to be inventive -- and best yet, keeping it SIMPLE.

The Eight Broads are also on target with current travel trends of what guests value most, with their focus on sustainable local foods prepared with an accent on flavor and freshness, and quick, easy-to-follow recipes that range from healthy to hearty and sweet to savory and caters to bringing multiple generations together to the table.

The Eight Broads are committed to sourcing their ingredients locally as much as possible. Regional specialties frequently highlight their breakfast menus with happy eggs from happy chickens, pork from humanely raised pigs, fruit grown right next door, and fresh herbs from their own gardens. Their recipes range from old family recipes like Bichermuesli to today's Lemon Ricotta Pancakes (that float like clouds!) and from Garden Baked Eggs to Pomegranate Ginger Muffins.

"Eight Broads in the Kitchen" retails for $29.95 and is available at each of the Broads' inns and in many of the Broads' favorite local shops. They are also available online -- with free shipping provided -- on their inns' websites, the Eight Broads' blog, www.eightbroads.com, and the Eight Broads' online storefront, www.eightbroadsinthekitchen.com,
